

Craig Chaquico

Guitarist/songwriter, Craig Chaquico, reached the top of the national charts first during the '70s and '80s playing lead guitar and writing songs with the popular gold and multi-platinum million selling bands Jefferson Starship and Starship from 1973-1990. He went on to place at the top of the charts again in the '90s and '00s as an award winning solo artist selling more than a million copies as a soloist.

Besides penning and co-penning hit songs like "Jane," "Find Your Way Back," "Layin' It On the Line," and "Rock and Roll is Good Time Music." He played lead guitar on every hit by the band from the #1 "Miracles" at the start of the '70s to the back-to-back-to-back #1s, "We Built This City," "Sara," and "Nothing's Gonna Stop Us Now" to wrap up the '80s.

In 1993, he released his first solo album of contemporary instrumental music, "Acoustic Highway," which after much critical acclaim became a #1 album at Billboard. This led to his follow-up album, "Acoustic Planet," which was nominated for a Grammy and again went to #1 at Billboard the very first week of release. For the next two decades of the '90s and '00s, Craig would go on to record music that would place him again at the top of the national charts for four consecutive decades in at least four separate musical categories...so far.

For 2007, while still continuing to tour as an award winning headlining solo artist, Craig has developed an incredible new classic rock show that incorporates his hits with Jefferson Starship and Starship along with his hit solo records.

Craig has found a vocalist you have to hear to believe.
